Foreign Animal and Emerging Diseases Course

May 13-18, 2007 • Crowne Plaza Hotel • Knoxville, Tennessee

The UT College of Veterinary Medicine will host an in-depth training course on Foreign Animal and Emerging Diseases in Knoxville, Tennessee from May 13-18, 2007. This event is jointly sponsored with the U.S. Department of Agriculture and includes speakers with international expertise.

This course provides an excellent opportunity for veterinarians, veterinary technicians and Extension agents. Other allied professionals who are responsible for foreign animal disease outbreak response will find this training beneficial. Concerns over the potential threat of agroterrorism in the United States make this course especially timely. Individuals in private practice, academia, industry and government are encouraged to attend.

Topics include:

- ▶ Potential Impacts of Agroterrorism
- ▶ Federal and State Response to a Foreign Animal Disease Outbreak
- ▶ Assessing Vulnerabilities of an Animal Facility
- ▶ Role of OIE and FAO
- ▶ International Animal Disease Control
- ▶ Mass Animal Care in a Disaster Setting
